Stories for Children to Give Them Voice in Caring for Our Earth

In celebration of Earth Week, the following books will be read to children and children at heart after the Masses on April 24. Some copies will also be given as gifts. Come on down to the lower level of the church and have a listen.

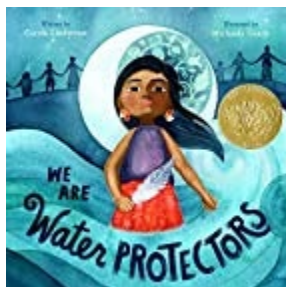

“Climate Change can be scary, so talking to children about this topic in a way that is both honest and empowering is important. Join Coco the squirrel and her dad on their quest to stop climate change and watch as her worries transform into the very thing that inspires her. This book offers a model conversation ... for how to have ‘The Climate Talk’ with children.” (Book Back Cover)

“Polar bears are in trouble. The earth is getting too hot and Polar Bear moms are very worried about the warm weather. It is affecting their homes and their food supply, and they are going to need our help. This climate change story gently introduces young readers to climate change and helps them feel like part of the solution.” (Book Back Cover)

“When a black snake threatens to destroy the Earth and poison her people’s water, one young water protector takes a stand to defend Earth’s most sacred resource. Inspired by the many Indigenous-led movements across North America, this bold and lyrical picture book issues an urgent rallying cry to safeguard the Earth’s water from harm and corruption.” (Book Flap)

You may also want to sign up for a special “Movie Monday” screening of the film, Youth V Gov which follows the story of a courageous group of young people fighting to secure their constitutionally protected rights to a safe climate through the court system. This film is presented courtesy of Interfaith Power & Light. Choose the date and time that work best for you:
